Schmidt has sent a number of letters from the Tombs urging the recipents to call and see him.

Among those whose connection with the case is being closely probed is Bertha Zech, who was an unwilling witness against the discredited priest. The authorities believe that the leg of the slain Aumulier girl, which was picked up off Keanchurg, N. J., could not have been carried that far by the tide, but that it was dropped into the sea somewhere on the New Jersey coast. New York is said to have 15,000 feeble minded public school children.
